Fergus County Health Department (FCHD) assists in coordinating activities in a public health crisis or emergency situation in Fergus County. Our work involves research, training and education, simulated exercises, public information and response.

FCHD provides and supports planning with community partners. During a public health emergency, FCHD plays a vital role in maintaining the health of our communities by preventing the spread of disease or reduce the impact of a major health risk. FCHD strives to provide timely and effective information about the situation and medical treatment.

FCHD works to have strong relationships with other community first-responder organizations, by working together before an incident, we can more effectively respond and communicate during a public health threat.
